Statement from NAHU on COVID-19

WASHINGTON -- As the nation's premier trade association representing health insurance agents and brokers, the National Association of Health Underwriters (NAHU) is committed to helping meet the healthcare challenges posed by the novel coronavirus and the disease it causes, COVID-19.

Many health insurers are waiving copays and cost-sharing associated with COVID-19 testing. These moves will ensure that out-of-pocket costs do not prevent consumers from getting tested or seeking treatment.

NAHU members play a critical role helping people secure coverage for vital healthcare services, including testing and treatment for COVID-19. They're also trusted advisers for employers, who count on them to assist their employees when they have issues with their coverage or questions about their benefits.

We at NAHU are committed to doing all we can to help reduce the spread of the novel coronavirus. We will continue to monitor COVID-19 closely.

The National Association of Health Underwriters represents 100,000 professional health insurance agents and brokers who provide insurance for millions of Americans. NAHU is headquartered in Washington, D.C. For more information, visit www.nahu.org.
